University looks for ways to cope with budget cuts

NEWS LIDITOR

Volume 03

Chancellor Nancy announced Monday that UNO is looking for ways to reduce the university budget, yet preserve the quality of education on campus.

The University of Nebraska system could face a reduction as high as 10 percent, which would mean a $6.2 million cut for UNO.

While the legislature's Appropriations Committee may still reduce the amount of the proposed cut, administrators at UNO have been working on finding solutions to the budget crisis that would affect students as little as possible.

Seven task forces, each of which includes at least one student representative from different colleges that might be affected, have examined ways to save money and come up with proposals for the realignment of units.

The task forces have evaluated first-year experience and student advising; student internships, outreach activities, disabilities and career services; business information and information science and technology; fine arts, communications and radio/television; faculty development, service learning, social work; university affairs and support functions of the chancellor's office.

Belck said she has accepted the recommendations that came from the task forces.

Under the plan, the College of Continuing Studies and the College of Chancellor Nancy Belck speaks to the media regarding the recently released Chancellor's Bulletin, which provided details of the budget cuts.

Public Affairs and Community Service would be merged together.

Other suggestions include the elimination of funding in the University Committee on Research and University Committee for the Advancement of Teaching.

The recommendations also call for finding savings through the reduction reassignment of staff and responsibilities in university affairs and the chancellor's office.

One of the recommendations calls for studying the creation of a new college that would include the College of Fine Arts and the Department of Communication. UNO TV and radio would also become part of the new college under the proposal.

A few members of the task force suggested incorporating a course that teaches time management and other study skills into existing courses designed to help first-year students with the transition into college.

Belck said the recommendations would create a total savings of $850,000.

"The budget cuts are tough, but we will still move forward," she said.

The proposed cuts require approval from the NU Board of Regents.

UNO celebrates diversity with annual Pow Wow

Issue 54

LEIA BAEZ STAFF WRITER

The first ever "Color Me Human" week at UNO will end with a bang Saturday, as several Native American tribes beat drums and dance in the fifth annual Native American Pow Wow.

Hand games, which are similar to the chance game, and the gourd dance, also known as a helushka or warrior society dance, will be part of the event, which begins at 10 a.m. in the Sapp Fieldhouse.

"The hand games, gourd dance and pow wow are ways to bridge connections between Native and non-Native communities," said Jessiline Anderson, faculty sponsor for the Intertribal Student Council at UNO. "Non-Natives can hope to gain an appreciation and understanding of Native American culture and traditions by participating in the events and activities.'

Individuals can expect to learn a lot about the Native American traditions through the crafts, food and gourd dance. The dance is a healing dance for Native American veterans and those affected during times of war.

Members from the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Huron, Omaha, Ponca, Santee Sioux and Winnebago tribes, among others, will lead the activities.

"This cultural event, which is both spiritual and social in nature, also serves to bring many different tribes together in an urban area," Anderson said.

Lucy Hackley, a member of the Intertribal Student Council at UNO, said Saturday's events will be a great learning experience for anyone.

"Much can be learned from a tribal council," Hackley said. "There is a purpose behind the drums and paint."

Admission is free for all of Saturday's activities, and the event is open to the public.

"These are social celebrations for the Native American communities," said Carolyn Fiscus, director of the UNO Native American Studies Program. "Everyone can participate."

More than 20 people attended "From Justified Concern to Hateful Prejudice," a discussion Wednesday led by Patrick McNamara, coordinator of the UNO Hate Crime Project.

The open dialog focused on diversity in America.

Utilizing his background in conflict resolution, McNamara discussed what defines hate crimes and what laws are in effect

During the program, participants spent time brainstorming the kinds of prejudices and name-calling that are based on religion and race. Participants shared the slurs they had heard on campus or in the community at large. Other thoughts included vandalism, physical attacks and cross burning.

A heated discussion of cross burning stirred the audience. Both reasons for and experiences related to the topic were discussed.

One incident shared dated back to 1976, when an audience member witnessed a cross burning in Carter Lake, Iowa.

Also discussed were categories of bias that are included

Students embrace Latino culture

NEWS EDITOR

UNO's Chicano Latino Studies sponsored a series of events throughout the month to explore Latino issues from the perspectives of community leaders, literature and films.

Lourdes Gouveia, associate professor of sociology and director of the CLS program, said not only did the Charla series present different viewpoints, but it also allowed participants to talk with scholars in the field of Latino studies.

"It's how we share our culture," Gouveia said. "It connects us all.

Throughout the years, the Charla series has focused on topics such as ethnicity and gender, community and identity and the future of Anglo-Latino relations.

The series opened with Cuban poet Nancy Morejón, who shared some of her writings. Morejón's work has explored Afro-Cuban themes. She has published 12 collections of poetry, three monographs, a dramatic work and four critical studies of Cuban history and literature. The event was co-sponsored with the black studies department.

The series continued April 15, when students received a unique opportunity to meet two former members of the U.S. House of Representatives. Former congressmen James Bilbray and Greg Laughlin spent three days at UNO as part of the "Congress to Campus

A group of more than 30 students attended a showing of Salt of the Earth (1953) Wednesday in the Milo Bail Student Center's Fireplace Lounge.

The movie is based on a 1950 strike by zinc miners in Silver City, N. M. It tells the story of Hispanic mine workers demanding better living and working conditions, ending the racist dual wage rates (paying white workers more than Mexican) and the realistic depiction of their harsh lives.

For the past 19 years, Creighton University has hosted the all-day event. Now, UNO will alternate Teams of three to five high school students will compete for prizes at two levels, primary and advanced. Primary teams are made up of students who have not yet completed one year of high school chemistry, while advanced teams are composed of at least one member who has completed one year of high school chemistry.

The teams will compete in six events: Sour Power, Quick Qual, Game Board Gallimaufry, Fax the Facts, Equation Balancing Act and Serial Dilution to a Better Solution.

The top three teams in each level will receive awards at a ceremony at the conclusion of the event.

"Students have a lot fun with this, and they really want to win the awards," said Ellyn Pohlson, a chemistry department assistant at UNO. "I think there is a lot of learning involved. From what I have heard, students really get into it and have a good time with it."

Keep safe to avoid rape

KARINE SOKPOH STAFF WRITER

Many think there is a set stereotype for rape victims.

There is no such a thing; it can happen to anyone, anywhere.

People usually think that rape victims are party-going, promiscuous women. Others think it will happen to everyone

But every woman, no matter where she lives or who she is, is at risk.

Get the facts:

According to O, the Oprah Magazine:

- Thousands of rapists remain free and continue to attack because their victims don't report the rapes.
- In the United States, a woman is sexually assaulted or raped every two minutes.
- One of every three women will be raped in her lifetime. Eighty-five percent of victims know their attackers.
- · A survivor of sexual assault is nine times more likely than the average personto attempt suicide.
- Eighty-four percent of rapes will go unreported.
- Only 2 percent of women who are raped will ever see their rapist spend a
- The average rapist rapes between eight and 16 women before he is caught.

The Women's Resource Center at UNO is a referral agency that helps survivors find counseling either at the YWCA or through the university's Counseling Services. The center also has information on how to avoid being raped.

Some of these tips are:

 Do not drink too much on dates Always trust your feelings when they tell you to leave and go home.

- If a person seems threatening to you, do not continue the friendship.
- Do not leave parties with strangers, especially when you are drunk.
- Do not get talked into something you do not want to do. Make your own choices and stick with them.
- Always have your keys in your hands before you get to your car.

Date rape is another very common type of rape among students.

The difference between rape and rape date is the victim has agreed to spend some time or go out with the rapist. Like rape, date rape is a felony.

The YWCA provides some tips on what to do if you become victim of rape:

- Do not wash or douche. You do not want to wash away any evidence that could be used against your attacker in court.
- Call the police and tell them what happened. If you are afraid to call the police, call your local rape crisis center.
- Go to an emergency room. While there, you will be examined. A doctor will make a record of your injuries and treat you. Samples of any fluid left in the vagina or anus (especially semen) will be gathered. Hair, pieces of clothing or other objects left by the attacker also may be taken. These samples may be used to help identify and convict your attacker.

If you spend time on campus late at night, it can be a good idea to memorize Campus Security's phone number or program it into your cell phone. The number is 554-2648.

Campus Security officers can walk students to their cars. In addition, there are emergency phones located throughout campus that can be used to request help.

UNO student Jill Johnstone climbs a wall similar to one UNO's Outdoor Venture Center hopes to have installed in the HPER Building by September.

High hopes for climbers

KRIS KOHLMEIER

SENIOR SEAL WRITER

Rock climbing beginners and enthusiasts will soon have a place to practice their skills at UNO, partly because of a campus petition drive.

A climbing wall, which will likely be completed by September, will be mainly funded by student fees.

A builder has already been picked out and a bid accepted.

The wall will take up most of the north and east walls of Room 110 in the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Building. The room is currently used mainly for martial arts.

"It's going to be big," says Matt Jensen, an Outdoor Venture Center rental employee.

The wall will have strategically placed grips and hooks for climbers. It will accommodate several styles of rock climbing, including bouldering, lead climbing and top rope.

Bouldering is climbing exceptionally difficult obstacles on boulders. Climbers do not use ropes, so it is done close to the ground in case of falls.

Lead climbing is when the climber takes the rope and hooks it into various holds along the route.

Top rope is a common indoor climbing style. In this style, the rope is attached to the top of the course.

Nearly anyone can do at least one type of climbing on the wall, and equipment is not always necessary.

With the wall funded, the only aspect left is the floor. For the best climbing, a padded floor would eliminate many bumps and bruises.

For the past two weeks, petitions have been circulating around campus to fund special flooring. In the entrance of HPER, there is a display of photographs and petitions.

Jensen says nearly 2,500 people have signed the petitions. The goal is 3,000, a number he believes is reachable.

In an upcoming Student Senate meeting, graduate college senator Kane Miller will present the signatures. After that, the Student Covernment will determine if it wishes to request more Besides private expeditions, the OVC offers several rock-climbing trips per year.

Omaha rockers The Cover Story will be playing a series of hometown shows in the next month.

The pop/punk quintet, which has been around for "about a year and a half," says guitarist Jeff Barrand, is playing the shows in support of its first album, the Self Taught No Lessons EP on Suckapunch! Records.

"[We want] to play as many shows as possible," Barrand says, "just get our music out to people."

Though just starting out, the band has gotten favorable turnouts at area shows.

"On any given weekend, usually we can get a couple hundred kids out there," Barrand, a former UNO student, Barrand admits the band's poppy sound often attracts a younger crowd but says its high-energy stage presence will entertain all.

"Our live shows is where we make the difference," Barrand says. "That's what sets us apart from other pop/punk acts. We're fun to look at and listen to.

On April 26, The Cover Story will be playing with other local acts Straight Outta Junior High and 8th Wave at the Ranch Bowl.

On April 30, the band will play a show benefiting Youth Emergency Services, a private non-profit agency that provides help, housing and assistance for troubled youth in the Omaha area. The show, at the Ranch Bowl, also features Omaha locals Anchondo.

On May 3, The Cover Story will play a "free chili dog" show with The Fonzies, The Miscasts and Straight Outta Junior High. The first 100 people in the door will receive a free chili dog.

Finally, The Cover Story will wrap up the local onslaught with another show at the Ranch Bowl May 12 with local group Mandown.

Baseball team splits with last-place Huskies

PAUL FREELEND

SENIOR STALE WRITTR

UNO's baseball team dropped a pair of one-run games to St. Cloud State, going 2-2 in the four-game series and staying in third place in the North Central Conference.

Second-place North Dakota State (28-15, 10-8) split its doubleheader with Minnesota State-Mankato, leaving the door open for the Mavs to pull into second place behind Northern Colorado. The Mavericks, however, managed only two wins, as they lost 4-3 and won 7-0 Monday before losing 5-4 and winning 10-0 Tuesday.

Two doubles in the bottom of the first inning put SCSU in the lead in game one, but the Mavericks tied it in the top of the fourth, as Jim Sledge hit a sacrifice fly that scored Eric Gordon.

UNO pulled ahead in the top of the seventh when Ty Fleck scored on Jake Wurth's single. Gordon followed with a sac fly that scored David Kros, putting the Mavs up 3-1. Nate McCabe was brought on to relieve Maverick starter Josh Funk with one out and a runner on third. McCabe gave up an RBI single, hit a batter and allowed a two-run single that ended the game, giving SCSU its second NCC win of the season.

Jon Christiansen, UNO's game-two starter, ran into no such problems, as he spun a four-hit shutout.

The Mays got all the offense they would need in the top of the third, as an error by the Huskies' catcher helped bring in a pair of runs.

After tacking on another run in the fourth, the Mavericks put the game away in the fifth, led by Justin Cook's three-run homerun. Christiansen struck out three batters and walked two as he improved to 3-2.

SCSU led 4-0 going into the top of the fifth in Tuesday's first game, but Patrick Johnston's two-run homer sparked a rally that tied the game at 4-4. The Huskies pulled back ahead in the bottom of the inning, though, as a wild pitch and an error allowed Travis Thompson to score the winning run.

. Weston Cooper came on to pitch one and a third perfect innings in relief of Chris Tate, but the Mavs failed to come up with any more runs.

As it had done the day before, UNO responded to an opening loss with a flurry of offense.

The Mavs posted seven hits and nine runs against SCSU starter Blayne Penney, who was not helped by three Husky errors.

Leading 1-0 in the third, Johnston put the Mavericks up for good with his second two-run homer of the series. The Mavs sealed the split in the fourth, scoring six runs on just two hits and two SCSU errors. Neal Belt gave up two hits over six innings with 11 strikeouts to improve to 2-3 on the year.

UNO (23-17, 9-5 NCC) will play its final road games with a pair of doubleheaders at South Dakota State Saturday and Sunday before returning home to close out the regular season with doubleheaders. May 2 and 3 against conference leader Northern Colorado.

Jake Wurth attempts to bunt during a recent game. The Mavericks, 23-17, 9-5 NCC, will travel to South Dakota State for a 1 p.m. game Saturday.

Softball team sweeps Bearcats, Krista Unger gets 100th win

PAUL FREELEND

SEGOR SEXEL WRITER

UNO softball pitcher Krista Unger recorded her 100th and 101st career wins Tuesday as the No. 11 Mavericks swept a doubleheader at Northwest Missouri State 4-1 and 10-1.

Unger pitched 13 total innings in the two games, giving up two runs and eight hits while striking out 16 batters and walking three. The two wins improved Unger's record to 19-4 on the season and the Mavs' record to 32-8.

Homeruns were the order of the day in the first game, as all five runs came from solo blasts. Andrea Lockett hit two roundtrippers, and Kelli Lentz and Nicole Vos also went deep for the Mayericks.

Ashley Pride scored NMSU's only run of the game, answering the homeruns from Lentz and Vos with a solo homer of her own in the bottom of the seventh inning.

While the flow of homeruns dried up tor UNO in the second game, the Mavericks continued to get extra base hits. With her team trailing 1-0 in the top of the third, Lentz hit a triple to right field and later scored on a single from Lauren McArthur. Amanda Lehotak put the Mavs ahead to stay in the top of the fourth, driving in Erin Bluml and Sarah Scheppers with a single to right center field.

It was not until the top of the sixth that UNO put the game out of reach. Doubles from Lentz and Vos doubled the Mavericks' lead before McArthur's seventh homerun of the season cleared the bases. The inning's scoring was completed when Lockett, who had doubled to left, scored on Shilo Jorgensen's single. Jorgensen scored during the next at-bat on an error by the right fielder. In all, the Mavs scored seven runs on six hits in the top of the sixth to pull ahead 10-1.

McArthur led the Maverick offense, going 3-for-4 with a run scored and three RBIs, while Lentz went 2-for-3 with two runs and two RBIs. Lehotak had two RBIs and a run while going 2-for-4, and Bluml was 2-for-3 with two runs scored.

UNO will close out the regular season Saturday and Sunday at the second North Central Conference North/South Showdown in Brookings, S.D. The Mavericks are scheduled to play North Dakota, hosts South Dakota State and No. 23 Minnesota State-Mankato Saturday and third-ranked North Dakota State and St. Cloud State Sunday. The Mavs will begin postseason play May 2 and 3 at the NCC tournament in Mankato, Minn.

under the umbrella of hate crimes. Items brought up ranged from sexual preference to national origin and ethnicity.

McNamara made a point to differentiate between race and ethnicity, citing race as a social construction of labels and ethnicity as one's national origin and cultural ties. This, too, was open for discussion, as McNamara said those definitions only reflected his opinion and not

Students gave examples of how race can differ from ethnicity, citing family members who could be perceived to be other races but were not. McNamara gave an example of this as he talked about a Sikh who was mistaken as a Muslim and killed.

McNamara also discussed the importance of the 2000 census, which allowed people to make multiple choices concerning race and Another topic of discussion included the legal side of hate crimes.

The term hate crime was defined as "a criminal act against a person or property that is motivated by bias because of a person's real or perceived race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, age or disability.

"In the U.S., you can think anything you want," McNamara said. "You can say almost anything, but when it crosses into criminal acts, it becomes a hate crime."

coming out of a gay support group meeting was discussed.

Mary Bender, a UNO gerontology professor, shared her views about such attacks.

She said the people who commit such crimes are "mean people.

"Nobody should be beating up anybody for any reason," she said.

McNamara used Bender's commentary to segue into discussing the three types of hate crime perpetrators. They include those who are out "just to have a good time," those acting in reaction to a conflicting situation and those who "have made it their mission" to go out and commit such crimes, McNamara said.

A pyramid of how hate crimes progress was given to the audience, along with the statistic that most hate crimes are committed by white males age 15 to 25.

According to the pyramid, hate crimes start with prejudice, escalate to name calling and then bullying before becoming full-blown hate crimes.

The audience came up with three areas that could be addressed in the early stages of the pyramid in order to prevent incidences from reaching the hate crime level. These included education on different cultures, exposure to them and a better job on the part of the media in their coverage of crime.

Senior criminal justice major Toia Phillips said et osure could prove to be the most valuable of the three, drawing from her experience as a multi-cultural individual.

"Kids who grow up in multi-cultural areas tend to not have these stereotypes," she said.

Another professor points students to his book by saying, "Look in my book, it's all there, written when I was a lot younger, a lot more coherent and, if I'm remembering correctly, sober.'

The site is also sure to give the submitter and professor credit, and as of this writing, there are no professors from Nebraska on there! (A little word of advice – I wouldn't submit any dumb quotes from a professor here until after the semester is over; professors do read The Gateway.)
